The Road to Driving

What do I need to do to obtain my driver's license?

You may need to take Driver's Education

To be safe – you have to take a class and be old enough to drive!

If you are under 18, you must pass a state driver's education course.

In Driver's Education, you will learn:
- Responsibilities
- Rules of the Road
- Driving Techniques
- Overall Safety

I took Driver's Education
and passed!

I have a permit, now what?

Practice driving with a licensed driver

Time to go to the DMV!

You need to bring:

Proof that you passed your Driver's Education class.

Your learner's permit and a record that shows you drove the required number of hours.

Personal identification such as Social Security card and a Photo ID.

I have the required items...

You will take a written test about what you learned in driver's education class.

You will take a road driving test with a DMV employee.

When you pass both tests, you will receive a license to drive.

Let's get my driver's license identification card

You must pass an eye exam.

If you pass, there are no restrictions on when you can drive.

If you don't pass the eye exam:
- You may be required to drive with glasses or
- You may be required to drive only in the daytime.

After the eye exam, you have your photo taken for your license.

Your driver's license is printed!

I am a licensed driver! ✈

Do I NEED car insurance…

…or is it a waste of money?

Yes, you NEED car insurance!

ALL states require drivers to have auto insurance.

You will be fined or lose your license if you do not have car insurance.

Yes, you NEED car insurance!

When you buy insurance, you get policy information on the car you are driving.

An insurance card will be sent by mail or electronically.

Before the Key is Turned…

- Do I have my Driver's License with me?

- Is there a current insurance card in the car?

- Does everyone in the car, including me, have their seat belt buckled?

- Is there anything or anyone blocking my view?

Drive Safely!
